

Question 19

Q: What is the difference between resonant analysis and harmonic analysis?

A: In resonant analysis, specific resonant frequencies and resonant modes of an analysis model are analyzed. The displacement and stress observed in a resonant mode are not given as absolute values but as relative values. In harmonic analysis, forced vibrations at specified frequencies are applied. Using harmonic analysis, the analysis of a vibration test can be conducted.